Donkey Attends Army Open Air.

"The Salvation Army Band was playing at an Open-air meeting in High Street South," says a Dunstable newspaper, "when a donkey, belonging to one of the residents in the meighbourhood, came out of its grazing ground and solemnly took its place in the ring. In spite of the vepcated attempts that were made to drive him away, Neddy stood his ground, and wagged his tail in a manner which denoted his full appreciation of the efforts of the musicians. Fortunately, he did not offer to join in the choruses, or the effect might have been disastrous. "There he stood, entranced, until the Soldlers formed in procession and marched down High Street to the Hall. Neddy formed up with the rest, and moved off in the procession, quietly and sedately, until the Band strinck up a march tune. Neddy seemed to enjoy it. He pranced about in the liveliest manner, keeping time with his fore legs, and putting in the procession deemed it prudent to give him a wide berth.

"A rope was procured, and he was escorted home, after having, as report asys, "furnished a little diversion in the streets in the very prosaic Sunday afternoon at Dunstable."—Bandsman, Songster, and Local Officer.

Lincoln and the Soldier.

Words That Saved a Life.

Some years ago, at a Lincoln meeting, among the old soldlers of a Michigan city, one of the battle-worn nicingan city, one of the battle-worn veterans gave the following iestimony: "We have heard what Lincoln has-done for all of us; I want to tell what he did for me. I was a private in one of the Western resiments that arrived in Washington after the call through the city amid great crowds of cheering people, and then, after going into camp were given leave to

"Like many others of our boys, the salcon or tavern was the first fifting we lift. With my conrade, I was just about lo go into the door of one of these places, when a hand was laid upon my arm, and, looking up, there was President Lincoln, from his great height above me, a mere lad, regarding me with those kindly eyes and pheasant smile.

"I almost dropped with surprise and bashfulness, but he held out his hand in strong Western fashlon, and said, 'I don't like to see our uniform going into these places.' That was all he said. He turned immediately, and walked away; and we pussed on. We would not have gone into that tavern for all the wealth of Washington City.

"And this is what Abraham Lincoln did then and there for me. He fixed me so that whenever I go near a saloon and in any way think of entering, his words and face come back to ane that experience has been a neans of salvation to my life. Today I hate the saloon, and have hated it ever since I heard those words from that great man."—American Social Gazette.

And The Army Got the Money.

The Royal Milling Company of Great Falls, Mont, received a letter from a repentant sinner detailing a list of things be had ctoten, and stating that he wished to make restitution. The wish to pay you for them, so I can have a clean heart, and be, as my cousin, on her death-hed, wished me to be—a good Salvation-lst." The manager replied: "Dear Sir,—Yours of the 30th uit. received. Helative to the machinery you say you took from us several years ago, will suggest that you send us $10.00 for same which we will turn over to The Salvation Army of Great Falls, and send you its receipt."

The $10.00 came in due course from the man, with a letter expressing his gratitude for kindness shown, and the manager sent the amount, with copies of the letters to Captain Munton.—American Cry.

When to Witness for God.

In the presence of an enemy, it is wise to be aggressive. Make the first advance to show your colours, before the other side takes the advantage. Many a victory has been given away to the enemy through neglecting to wincess for God upon the first opportunity. Once lost, it is hard to get back the position. Abram had reached the promised land, but the Cananite was still there, and, without waiting to see what kind of religion prevailed in the land, or giving time for any templation or fear of man to hinder, he himmediately se' about creeting his altar, and called upon the name of his God. Our temptations are not all over when we give ourselves, to follow God fully, but, if we will be obedient, there will be needed grace supplied. We are only what we are when tested, and the testing will go on all through life's journey. Erecting God's altar is one of the tests. THE GREAT IDEA.

Glimpse at Mr. Arnold White's Impressions and Conclusions Concerning the Social Work of The Salvation Army.

R. ARNOLD WHITE is master of a trenchant style, a publielst who commands respect, and a keen critic of public arairs. The scope of his writings on national matters may be gathered from the works he has written, which include "Problems of a Great City," "The Letters of S. G. O. to Times," "The Modern Jew," "Empire and Efficiency." "For Efficiency." w the Social Work of The Salvation Army would impress one of his enial makeup, it would be interesting to know. He has recorded his inions and impressions in a book called "The Great idea," which is the Annual Report of The Salvation Army's Social Work.

The contents include a foreword and fifteen chapters. In his "Forerd," Mr. White says that, "When invited to undertake the work of riting the volume, I was unwilling to assent, owing to the absence of my spiritual qualification. Writing frankly, I revere and admire, but m mable to comprehend, "The Great Idea" that rules The Salvation rmv."

rom Slum to Palace.

Mr. White's disability, however-if it be a disability-is not apparmt. and it certainly does not prevent him from seeing how much "The eat idea" has to do with the success of the Work, nor from appreciiting it to the full.

On the question of the Great idea itself, Mr. White has this to say: "To grasp the Great idea is to understand the height and depth of he self-sacrificing devotion, the reason for the common sense, the reource and readiness of The General and his Officers, in seeking to nan it seeks to change him within. It imparts hope to the man whose adinc in the battle of life is due to his own character and conduct.

No change in circumstances, no beterment in social conditions, affects the nature of the man. The property of the rich may be divided among the poor, but, until their hearts are changed they will receive little or no benefit. Slum dwellers taken from the slums and lodged a a value will quickly alter palatial conditions into slundom. The idea is simply to introduce suffering humanity to the Christ of the Gospels, and to re-state, in language Intelligible to the masses, the offer of the Water of Life."

The finances of the Salvation Army possess remarkable interest for the persons; the conclusions of Mr. White may be of interest to such. In the chapter headed "Finance," he says:-

Salvation Army Finance.

"When discussing The Salvation Army, it is common to hear a man ay, What a pity that 'bey never publish a balance sheet!' The fact that they do publish a balance-sheet, have slways done so, and that any-One can get a copy from Headquarters, Queen Victoria Street, by ask-ing for it, does not seem to be known. The financial methods of The Salvation Army, differ only from those of the best British railways and Banks, in respect to the accounts being kept and audited by The Army in greater detail than those of large commercial enterprises worked under the Limited Liability Act. The Army audit requires and receives A more exhaustive cash check, both of income and expenditure, than is either demanded by the proprietors or supplied by the directors of banks and railways. Before anything in the nature of banky panky in mans and railways. Hefore anything in the nature of pansy pansy in finance can be effected, the collusion of Messrs, Knox, Cropper & Co. the auditors to The Salvation Army whose senior partner is the auditor to the Midland Railway Company, 1s essential. Those who deny the exactitude, clearnoss, and ofder with which Salvationist accounts are kept, not only are heedless or ignorant, but dabble in terminological

Makes Money Go Farther.

"Not only are the accounts properly kept but the result of recent investigation satisfies me of the fact that The Salvation Army does actmily make money go farther then other philanthropic agencies working in the same field. It is a large field, and there is room for many pleasis, but the Salvation pleasin turns a deeper and a larger furrow for the same money than its companions in sociological sgriculture. In the first place no other body in the world commands the gratuitous, or sleasing the same money than its companions. share tractitions, services of so many self-denying workers, who strive to make a shilling do the work of eighteen pence. The Salvation Army so not sweat others, but they do most crucily sweat themselves. Secondthe business of the construction of the Army enable the departmental administration to effect economies in purchase such in distribution, which are appealed in the case of smaller or sansatane.

Mr. White says: "I plead for a Government grant, and for private aid for the Salvationist Social Work, not because The Army is holy, but because it is cheap and efficient."

There are many interesting stories throughout the book. Here is

A Remarkable Story.

"Another man's story was a romance. He had been a thief and almost everything else that a sportsman should not be. He found a gay life unpalatable, nevertheless, and when he came to the penitent form, sobbed and eried for an hour and a quarter. Nothing comforted him. At last his spiritual director, amid gasps and sobs extracted the confession that he had committed the unpardonable sin of having dedicated himself to the devil, sealing the compact by having the portrait of his satanic master tattooed over his heart. For days he remained in a state of uncontrollable dejection. With the common sense and wisdom characteristic of Salvationist administrators, the services of a new tattooer were called in, and the devil was either touched up so as to present an angelic guise, or was completely obliterated over the region of the heart.

"He left the Colony two and a half years ago, for a situation found him by The Army with an outside farmer, where he has remained since. glving satisfaction to his employer."

Air. White has endeavoured to obtain official and corporate coin-ion of The Salvation Army's Work. The chapter dealing with that aspect of his investigations, contains the following:-

The Converted Cook.

"On arrival at Berne, I invited Commissioner McAionau to name three high officials of the Republic who could be trusted to give an impartial opinion on the subject of the Heilsarmee of Switzerland. His Excellency the President was, unfortunately away. The Vice-President, Herr Comtesse, Vice-President of the Bundesrath, who was credited with rooted hostility to The Salvation Army, very kindly received me. The fact that I was warned by Commissioner McAlonan that Herr Comtesse had considerable antipathy to The Army, made me the more eager to learn his opinion.

"He admitted without circumlogation that in former days the public and the Administration were opposed to The Army, and caat, in his view, the opposition was due to causes that have now been removed. The official world regarded the work of Commissioner McAlonan and his Officers as something more than benevolent. In short, Herr Comtesse gave his henison where I was told to expect a curse. One very high officer of State in Switzerland was converted to friendship for The Army in this way. He had in his service a cook of supreme ability, who was, as is sometimes the ease with good cooks, addicted to the black bottle-Sunday, especially, that day of repose and enjoyment for epicures like other people, was often rulned for the statesman by the inebricty of the artist in sauces and stews. Dismissal was imminent, when lot the cook found salvation. The drink habit was cured. The cook was redeemed from ruin, and her mastery over spit and oven was recovered. There remained one drawback. The time that she had formerly devoted to the bottle was now taken up with prayer; but Herr --- with a faint smile, said: 'When she was not at prayers her cooking was perfect, but of the two habits, alcohol and prayer, for cooks at all events, I pre-

Not Charity Nor Church.

The last chapter deals with the future of The Salvation Army, and last paragraph is as follows:—

"I look, therefore to The Salvation Army, mightily compacted, regreated and supported by Governments; loved by the people of many lands; enlarged out of all comparison, and sustained by mankind in its good works not as a charity or a Church, but as the efficient of derellet, disinherited, and distressent men, women and children under the light of the Great idea."

There are included in the book an array of marvellous statistics from which we take the following—they relate to 1969.

E began life in misery.

He was the child of parcents who spent all their money in drink.

His infancy was spent in his mother's arms in the "Queen's Arms," or the "Royal Arms," a double embrace which afforded his young soul little acquaintance either with maternal affection or royal favour. His early childbood was also spent chiefly in public-houses, where he stood at his mother's knee, half-suffocated in a dark and moving world of trousers, petriconts and split liquor.

By the time he was tall enough to fend for himself in the streets; he preferred them to the tavern. He had long been used to going homewith his mother after midnight, and now he very often waited for her outside the public-house door until he was so tired that he crawled away to sleep in a yard or a doorway. Arms," or the "Hoyal Arms," outside the publichouse door until the was so tired that he crawled away to sleep in a yard or a doorway. The streets had no terrors for him. This life of neglect, misery, and destitution, by some miracle, did not depress Teddy. He grew up, in spite of it sharp, active, acute and humorous. He was sharp enough to provide himself with food to avoid thrashings from his father, and to find comfortable dosses in hack yards. Later, he was acute enough to see that the ranks of an infantry regiment was the best place for a hungry, growing boy. He enlisted, and soldiered without distinction, but without great crime, till his time was up. Throughout his soldiering, he was a cockney humourist.

Drink was getting hold of him; but he was strong, and could carry a "akin full." He came out of the army a hard drinker, but not a drunkard. He had his wits about him. He became a marine-store deal-

Things began to go better. He was really attached to his wife, and for her sake he made a married fight keep out of the publichouses; there were worked weeks when he did not drink a glass of beer, or waste a penny in the taverns. His home was really a very happy one, as happiness goes in shabby London.

He got his living—that is to say, money for drink, by a hundred clever dodges. Although this man has a face which reminds one of Flaman's friends, throughout his life he has been inoffensive, always he has enjoyed popularity. "No one can help liking old Teddy," is a phrase in the district. The man is reckned clever. He would take the laces out of his boots, so into public-bouses district. The man is reckoned clever. He would take the laces out of his boots, go into public-bouses where he was not known, and offer them for sale. He made moory is this fashion, and could sleep with the laces is his pocket ready for the next day's traffic. His eyes were been to notice vendible things in back yards and in gutters. He cadged his way through life, without committing crimes. In a moment of destitution, he got hold of a sheet of newspaper, tore it into strips, and sold them at a penny each, as "hringers of luck." sond them are permy care, and them are sof luck." He was too good-tempered to be a criminal.

But he found it harder and ever harder to pick up sufficient money to satisfy his increasing craving for drink. He sank deeper into the gutter, his joirally began to leave him, his old companions showed less disposition to pay for his drinks, less disposition to pay for his drinks, less disposition to listen to his jests. For one thing, his clothes were now the foul rags of a tramp.

Here Mr. Regbie relater an incident which, he mys. gave Teddy a 'turn." A fellow tramp had died, while asleep in a cart, and was mistaken for the subject of the story, when Teddy heard of this, the thought occurred to him that he might be called away in the same sudden manner, and his soul was filled with fear.

He thought, continues the author, "What can I do?" It seemed to him that he must first of all, escape from the present life. He could never more sleep in that cart. He must have just his old haunts. Best of all, is must leave London behind him. Somewhere, he must find work. (Continued on page 14.)

But the law does not always serva even handed justice in sotting the innocent free and numbibing the guilty it occasionally does the reverse of this hecause circumstantial evidence, and sometimes the most direct and positive evidence, cannot always be relied upon.

In a certain city, a masked bandit with a pistol, stole $5,000, with the result that a most respected citizen of the place, who huppened to be near the scene was arrested and charges with the robbery. The keeper of the money positively identified him as the thief, and then, to make the evidence against the citizen more convincing, a minister, with equal positiveness, declared him to be the man.

But circumstances afterward saved the accused from even a taint of dishonour. A man who had a grudge against the real thief, gave information to the police that resulted in his arrest, and the recovery of the stolen money, and this man to the surprise of even the aforesald positive witnesses, proved to be in upperances, a very good duplicate of the first man charged with being the cumstantial evidence is not always

The moral of all this is that elementantial evidence is not always to be relied upon, and that juries should carefully weigh up all the facts of the cuse before deciding on a verdict.

Race for South Pole.

It is expected that by the end of the year, three great nutions—Britain, France, and the United States—will be engaged in an active race for the South Pole.

France already is represented somewhere within the Autaretic zone by Dr. Jean Charcot, who safled South from Rio Janeiro, on October 22, 1908. Nothing has been heard from him since April 17th, last, when his wife received a letter from Deception Island.

Britain is about to rend two expeditions. Recently it was announced in London that the British Government stood ready to advance $100.000 for the expedition to be commanded by Capitain R. C. The electrocuting trap is accommodatingly designed to dispose of any number of rats, so that it may be employed even in a rat-infested quarter. With characteristic thoroughness, the inventor has equipped his death-dealing apparatus with electrical signals, which announce the killing of n captive, by means of an incandescent lang or bell.

Currents of such low tension are employed that human beings are not injured by accidental contact, with this "five" electrical trap.

The lassic Capitain went down the alsie and commenced to pray loudly just near the men. In less than a minute they woke with a start, and made for what they supposed was the door. Our sallor, however, lost his bearings, and came into collision with the penitent form, where a Soldier held him fast. A few minutes later he was on his knees, sobbing out his heart to God. To-day he is finappy in God's service.

Where He Spent His Money.

A young convert of a Corps in Ontario, was selling War Crys. As is the custom with "boomers," he went into several saloons. At the door of one of these vile-smelling places, he paused, and then pushed his way through the big swing doors. No sooner had he got inside, than a man who had just ordered a drink, caught sight of him.

The milliorm seemed to dazzle his eyes for a moment, and then he cried to the bartender:

Ensign Wilson Visits Kingston.

The Christmas season brought to Kingston a popular and welcome guest, in the person of Ensign Middele Wilson, of New York, daughter of the late Dr. Henry Wilson, whose brave stand for God and The Army, in its early days, has left a lasting inducence for good amongst filipsconians. Although the Ensign was on a holiday, she brought the april to war with her, and was not content to come and go without do the large public gatherings in the Citadel, besides doing a drawing-room meeting in one of the influential bonnes of the city.

On Studday afternoon, December 20th, a great welcome meeting was arranged in the Cit. del, at without maby of the Ensign's old friends were present. At night the Ensign's eloquent and forceful address on

The Artiste's Discovery and the Result.

A young man who had imbibed strong drink to excess, wandered into the big tent of a travelling show in the North-West. He took quite a fancy to the "freaks," and particularly interested himself with a little old man in a bath chair.

A year later the same young man got converted in an Army meeting in High River.

One day this town was visited by the show. The beating of The Arny's drum attracted the attention of several "artistes," so much see that one—the little old man—asked that he might be carried into the Hall. Imagine his surprise, when a young man, whom he recognised as his drunken patron of last year, now clad in red guernesy and tunic, grasped his hand and asked him about his soul's welfare.

The young convert's words went about bls soul's welfare.

The young convert's words went home to the little man's heart, and just as he sat in his chair (his deformity prevented anything like walking) he cried to God for pardon.

Before he was carried away, he was able to testify to acceptance with the Father.

A Better Job -- Prayer Answered.

Out of work, discouraged, and sorely tried by the devil, a convert of a certain Corps felt very unhappe. Since his conversion, he had tried very hard to pay off some debts contracted during his past life, but, unfortunately, not with little success in his effort. The devil was not slow to hint that being saved was not such a happy experience after all. But our convert stood his ground, prayed and believed for Divine help. And sure enough, it came.

On Wednesday afteruoon, December 25th, the Ensign spoke on the "Principles and Work of The Salvation Army," in a Drawing-Room meeting, which, through the kind-ness of Mr. and Mrs. Dation, who loaned their spacious drawing-rooms for the occasion, we were able to arrange. Almout forty guests were present. Mr. Edward Pennes, Editor of the "British Whig." presided in the chair. Ensign Wilson's address was listened to with marked attention. At the close of the address, Mr. John Meintyre, K.C., in a few well chosen words, moved a vote of liannes to the speaker, who was go well known and loved in Klugston, the speaker, who was go well and the proporturity of expressing his regard and appreciation of General Booth and his work. The slave threw himself at the feet of his redecmer, and covered them with kisses. He refused all offers freedom: and as long as he lived, it was his joy to serve his new master.

This little incident is a picture of the love that Christ had for us, when, though we were strangers and even enemies to Him He gladly laid down His life that we might be happy and blessed both bere and hereafter.

We do not wonder that the poor slave loved his preserver. We should think it very strange if he did not. But what of ourselves? The feeling of the poor slave wards the Englishman should be just our feeling towards God.

The fruit of the Spirit is" -first of all-"love:" the greatest and most wonderful thing in the world. know a good deal about God's love to us: but what about our love to God? Is this first and most important fruit of the Spirit manifested daily in our lives? Do we really and truly love God? I mean, love Him in deed and action, as well as in word: for it is often a great deal easter to talk than to act. But Christ says that His servants are not those who say, but those who do.

A gentleman chanced to be visiting a friend one day, when the children of the house came home from

One child hugged her mother, and said; "I fove you a whole bushel tull!" Another cried, "And I love your a big barrel full!" The eldest came in just then, with his arms full of wood, for it was his business to keep the kitchen supplied with fuel-a job that he hated with all his heart. He balted by his mother. sald laughingly, "Mamma, I love you a whole armful of wood!" boy treated the matter as a joke. but he had, nevertheless, gone to the root of the matter. Love would not let him rush off to play with the other boys till his distasteful task done. He might have put it off telling himself he would do it "by and by," or even have shirked it all together.

I have known some boys and girls shirk their daily duties, without thinking that mother will have to take them up in addition to her own-The hoy's love was unselfish, and love that is unselfish is true love. It is just the sort of love Paul snoke of when he wrote to the Galatians-"The fruit of the Spirit Is love."

When I was a very little girl, people would ask me if I "loved Jesus " and I always answered. "Oh. yes." Of course, everybody "loved Jesus." I had been told that we ought to love Him because He died for us, and it would be very ungrateful not to do so; but that my love had anything to do with my dally life and actions, would have been quite 2 new idea had anyone suggested it.

"I've been all around this meeting, and asked everybody if they love God, and they all say they do," sald a young "fisher" to the leader of the prayer meeting.

The Captain smiled. "Go to them again" he said, "and ask them how they love Him, and what difference it makes in their lives, and to others round about them.

The boy went back, and behold, one and another dropped their heads, and muttered that they didn't know. They were like the people the Lord speaks of in Ezekiel xxxiii. 31, who. with their mouth show much love. but their heart goeth after covetousness . . . they hear Thy words, but they do them not." People they hear Thy were pretty much the same two thousand years ago as they are today, as you will see if you study the matter.

John says in his First Epistle, "My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tengue, but in deed and in truth." And James (ii. 15 16) shrewdly warms his people that words alone will not clothe the naked or feed the hungry. Paul, too. warns the Romans to let their love "without dissimulation;" which means, without pretence of any kind.

Now, if we love God, how should that love manifest itself in us?

First of all, in my own case, it slave feit grateful to the Englishman for having sked his blood for him, so I felt grateful to God who had borne so long with my rebellion and hard-heartedness. I think most people feel like this when they are Seet saved.

Again, you remember the two slave served his kind master as long as he lived, and utterly referred to

The Commissioner, who is ever on the alert to push forward the claims of the War has decided to inaugurate a united effort for a great spiritual uplift during the months of February and March next.

The Crusade, very fittingly, starts with a Y. P. Effort, the dates being February 1st to 13th. The splendid Work that has been accomplished among the Young People of Toronto, demonstrates something of the mighty possibilities of this branch of The Army's work.

The plan of Campaign will also include a Reconciliation Week, which will commence with a Soldiers' and ex-Soldiers' social gathering.

The last week in February will be directly in the interests of backsliders, followed by another week of soul-saving effort. -31

A practical and determined effort will also be made to secure Candidates.

The last few days of March will be devoted to Soldier-making, finishing up with an Euroliment of Re-

Every Corps in the Territory will take part. Provincial and Divisional Commanders will send on targets to each Corps under their Command.

There will be half-nights of prayer at every centre.

In addition to the half-night of prayer, Officers and Soldiers will set apart special time for prayer during the day.

Every "War Cry" reader is asked to participate in this great Campaign. for the salvation of the people, and the uphuilding of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ under the dear old Army Flag.

More particulars in the next.

OUR LEADERS' CAMPAIGN.

Elsewhere will be read the accounts of the Commissioner's special meetings in the West. It will be seen that God has greatly blessed the services in a variety of ways. The acknowledgement of the work of The Salvation Army by the civic authorities and citizens of Whanipeg. has been made in a manner creditable to their generosity; and we must say that the Commissioner's address, a newspaper report of which we have before us us we write, on "Canada in the Making," is inspiring to a degree, and we are not surprised that it called forth the warm praise of the Hon. T. M. Daly, as contained in the "Globe" extract. But what, perhaps, is most significant to the Salvationist is the hot heart-stirrings experienced by the Officers and Soldiers of that centre.

Commissioner and Mrs. Counts the Chief Secretary and others who are on the Trans-Continental Tourwill visit nearly every Corps in the West, and there is no doubt but that the same fervour and zeal will be imparted to comrades in the other centres of Salvation Armyism.

Now, all this augurs well for the success of the great crusade which be waged throughout the months of February and March. A crusade that we trust will set the country in a blaze. This Crusade will take place immediately on the return of our Leaders to Hendquar ters. They will then have visited centres which will touch the whole of the Dominion. Let every one pray that the season of preparation now being undergone may be productive of the noblest results in the revival of God's people and the saving of souls.

Yorkville.-On Saturday night two souls were delivered from Satan's chains. On Sunday, January 2th, Captain Bunton led the holiness meeting, at the close of which one soul claimed full salvation; also the night meeting, in which five Juniors and four Seniors cried for salvation. The afternoon meeting, at Mrs. Lieut. Colonel Turner and Mrs. Lieut. Colonel Howell were present, was led by the Cadets.

New Year's Message from The General.

This Message Appeared in the British Cry. Perhaps You Would Like to Sign It.

"Comrades,-There is not a soul amongst you that would not like 1910 to be a better year than any that have gone before it, and "Glory to God in the highest," this can be so.

"You can have more peace in your mind. More people in your meetings. More Soldlers on your Rolls. More souls at the mercy seat.

More honour for Jesus Christ, and More treasure laid up in Heaven.

'Yes, you can have all these precious things and more. The New Year is in your own hands. It is true that the difficulties that bar your way are great. The devils are strong. The darkness is dense. The hearts are hard, and the saorrows that often weigh you down, are mysterious; and, left to yourselves, you will be defeated. But Almighty power can make 1910 gloriously triumphant.

The conditions on which the bestowment of that power depends, are Earnest Prayer Godly Living, and Simple Faith, and Desperate Fighting.

"I am willing to join you in a holy undertaking for the fulfilment these conditions, and, in token thereof, sign my name at the foot of this column.

"If you will join me in this sacred contract go down on your knees hefore God, and sign your name opposite to that of your affectionate

IMPORTANT DECISION

Justices of First Department, Appellate Division, New York State Supreme Court, Unanimous in Recommending a Reversal of Justice O'Gorman's Decision in So-Called "American Salvation Army" Case.

Judgment Appealed From Should be Reversed and a New Trial Ordered.

Canadian comrades rejoice with our comrades over the border, on learning of the unanimous recommendation of the five judges sitting in the First Department, Appellate Di-vision, Supreme Court of New York before whom The Army appealed the decision of Justice O'Gorman, in the so-called "American Salvation Army" case, that, "The judgment appealed from should be reversed, and a new trial ordered,"

The case came before the Justices at the December term, and has just cen decided. The sitting Justices were George L. Ingraham, Chester 'caughlin, John Proctor Clarke, James W. Houghton, and Francis M. Scott. As already stated, the Jastices' recommendation is unanimou ly in favour of The Salvation Army.

We have not the space to relearse the entire history of the case, suffice it to say that The Salvation Army some months since applied for as injunction to restrain what it regarded as one of its imitators, the so-call-ed "American Salvation Army," frem using a name, uniform, publications, etc., which it considered so closely akin to its own, as to be prejedicial to its interests. Justice O'Gorgana before whom the case was argued, de cided adversely to The Army.

The Sunday afternoon lecture was an inspiration—the Dominion Theatre being packed to suffocation. Hundreds were turned away, in spite of the integral cold. a rousing song, Brigadier Burditt inroduced the Commissioner, who, following a few words from the Chief Secretary, plunged into a heart talk, showing from the character of Samson, how possible it is to have a good start, and yet an unsatisfactory finish. As the words fell from his lips, one could see depicted upon many faces deep conviction and hardly had the Commissioner finished before the first soul responded to the invitation given, and at the close we rejoiced over fourteen at the mercy seat, among them heing some very interesting cases. One, a young man who some years ago, was called to Officership, but refused to obey. In that meeting he made up his mind to go all lengths. Another was an old comrade: whose return was received with so much foy that as they saw him woud his way to the mercy seat, his comrades could not refrain from a hand-clap. The last to yield was an elderly man who, years ago, was a front-rank Soldler, and whose return was a fitting climax to a gathering which will live long Ing ever delivered on this theme, on any Canadian platform. There were many Officers of The Army in attendance, and the spirit manifested was of a most extraordinary character, a remarkable tribute heing paid to the place which The Army, owing to its philanthropic work, had gained, in the regard of the citizens of the Dominion.

Commissioner Coombs leaves the city on Tuesday morning, and will conduct services at all points along the main line of the Canadian Pacific.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

The Sunday afternoon gathering in the Dominion Theatre, was a mighty affair. The building was packed to suffocation, in spite of the fact that the weather outside was of a character that would have deterred most acoule from leaving their comfortable homes. It is, however, evisloner is sufficient to bring together the elite of Winnipeg, for, as one of the City Controllers expressed himself to the writer, The City of Winninez could not have produced a better audience."

The Theatre was crowded long before the hour set for the opening, and hundreds were turned away for lack of secommodation. Surrounding Commissioner Counts and his Staffwere men prominent in the political. civic and business life of the chig. Movor Evans had the honour of presiding. Sir Daniel McMillan, Lieu-tenant-Governor of Manicoba, and Lady McMilian occupied one of the boxes, and among the other prominent personages present, were: Wm. Whyte, 2nd Vice-President of the C.P.R.; E. J. Chamberlin, "neral" manager of the G.T.P.; D. A. Roes, M.P.P.; Hon, T. M. Daly; J. A. M Atkins, K.C.; and members of the city council and board of control.

His Worship Mayor W. Sandford Evaus Esq., made an excellent chairman. In introducing the Commissioner, he stated that the work of The Army had his unqualified approval, and he had great pleasure in gathering, and to listen to his legture on "Canada in the Making."

The Commissioner then stepped forward and for ninety minutes kent his audience spelibound with interest, as was evidenced by the volumes. of applause which punctuated his utterances. Wm. Whyte Esq., 2nd Vice-President of the C. P. R., proposed: the vote of thanks, and the Hon T. Mayne: Daly Esq., ably seconded the same, and a most successful meeting was brought to a close by the singing of the Doxology.

SUNDAY NIGHT.

For the Sunday night meeting, the Dominion Theatre was again packed, and as the Commissioner dealt out the truth, tearing away the subterfuges behind which so many hige. one felt that if such truth were proclaimed from every Canadian pulpit and platform, it would surely mean that the Dominion would soon be won for Christ. Not a move was made by the crowd, so surely were they following the truly inspired words of the Commissioner, Although feeling somewhat weary as a result of the earlier meetings, the Spirit of God was manifestly glyging him hodily as well as spiritual strength, and on the Fountain being opened the invitation given, the first volunteer was soon at the mercy-

It was evident that it was to b a hand-to-hand conflict, and the devilwas not going to ict any of people go to God without a mighty struggle. The enemies of God seemed to be strongly entrenched, and it was only by violent effort that each step of the ground was taken from the enemy. The people of God however held on in faith, and step by step an advance was made to victory.

It was a God-glorifying sight to see a dear woman seeking God in one of the theatre boxes. As I write, Brigadier Burditt is asking for the eleventh to take up the cross and come to Jesus. One by one they came, some weeping, and others with heaving breast, until we rejoiced over eighteen at the mercy seat, making a total of forty for the week-end. Hallelujah!

The Commissioner was ably assisted by Mrs. Coombs. the Chief Secretary, Lieut-Colonel Howell, Brigadier and Mrs. Burditt, Major Findlay, and Staff-Capt. and Mrs. Arnold, whose soles proved very effective. -----

Between the morning and after-noon meeting, Major Findley and Staff-Captain McAmmond conducted a meeting with about seventy prisoners in the Provincial Jail.

Rev. Dr. Murray rose and proposed a vote of thanks. He said he found everywhere he went The Army did the same work, and was the same spiritual as well as social uplifting force. He first met The Army in New Brunswick, and saw marvels wrought by its power there, and when he came West, found that in one district where he was labouring himself The Army had thoroughly transformed the whole community.

The vote of thanks was seconded by the Rev. Mr. Churchlil, who, in his remarks, stated that he himself heen brought to Christ by the efforts of The Salvation Army.

The audience was enthusiastic in expressing their appreciation of the Colonal's lecture

A most interesting time was spent at this place, first with the Soldlers of the two Corps, where we met and had tea with the Colonel, who gave them some very valuable advice, and teaching them the way to become better and more useful Sal-

From this we adjourned to the auditorium where the Colonel again lectured, the chair being occupied by ex-Mayor Rutledge, a preminent business man of this city. The Citizens' Band had very kindly offered their services to attend this meet-ing, and rendered suitable music prior to the commencement of the lecture.

The address of the Colonel was most interesting and powerfully described the operations of The Army in the twenty-two different countries and colonies which he himself had visited.

Much enthusiasm was manifested throughout the addre s, and when a of thanks was proposed and seconded by two prominent gentle-men of the city, the congregation most enthusiastically endorsed their senliments. The Colonel replied in well-chosen words, not forgetting to thank the chairman upon his part in conducting the meeting and the Band for their services, in rendering music to the congregation.

At this place the Presbyterians very kindly loaned their heautiful Church, and Captain Machin, M.P.P., presided at this gathering.

The Colonel, in his earnest, sympathetic and eloquent manner laid efore the audience gathered there, the wonderful work of The Army in all parts of the world, showing the adaptability of those engaged in its ranks, to meet the needs of every community, high or low, rich or poor, black or white.

During the recital of the wonders wrought through The Army throughout the world, many eyes were filled with tears, and in this place, as at the others, in the taking of the offering, the measure of sympathy was manifested by the generosity with which the people responded.

The chairman gave a glowing tribute to the change which he, himself had noticed in the attitude of the people of all grades towards The Army, and with enthusiastic ap-plause, this lecture was brought to a close.

The Colonel's visit has been most wouderful, both the Officers and our own Soldiers being lifted up and greatly inspired through his personal talks with them and prayers for them and all unite in saving "God bless our Chief Secretary and send hlm quickly back again."

Water on these, and they, too, would have been short-teruting earth of the current unleashed in dots and dashes through wirgs, erlescrossing earth. Water on these, and they, too, would have been short-teruting earth of the current throughout the system, would have been, shot through the bodies of the men. With a roar, out of each key widdle have sizzled a white-hot fame, and like the snappling of suggers the eight hundred men would have been flashed into eternity as if they had been strapped into so many executioners' cheirs.

From overhead came the trample of feet, the shouts of the fremen, and the dull impact of streams. The smell of burnt wood and volumes of cheeks, the shouts of the firmen, and the dull impact of streams. The smell of burnt wood and volumes of clicking smole filled the room. But not for an instant did the Jingling of keys cease; for to quit at this, the busioest, hour of the night, would have suaried the commany into a tanger within the tween them and sudden death was the thlekness of a training that in the or under the work in hand; but not a man describilistic, too, is an unwritten law that, in time of peril no man may deer with the seart life post, any more than a can-

So far as, the companies are concerned, the man who endangers his life in the services, is doing simply what is expected, of him. But up on the horse of the skyserapers of our files, where work regiments of whose fingers pulgate the throbs of waster hearts, veterans who have sligger, lanke the history of the significance in the littery of the spinding of the most striking instances was that of Lee Fairchild, night telegraph operator in a signal tower on a single-track railroad running through Weldon, North Carolina: He had let a north-bound berry train in to his bluck, and while it was burning up the rails at the rate of forty-live miles an hour, he was horrifted ose a souta-bound excursion train, laden with four bundred men, won and abuldren whigh the signal.

inve milics an hour, he was horrified to see a south-hound excursion train, baden with four hundred mon, women, and ehildren, whiz by the signal he had set against it 250 yards up the track.

One chance in a thousand Fairchild saw to prevent a head-on colliston and frightful statistier—and he look it. As the locomotive of the excursion roared by, he stood for an instant on the sill of the window in the tower, then he dived flat, six feet forward and downward, landing on his hands and knees upon the roof of a passenger car. The impetus of the train was so enormous that it sild from under him almost the length of the car, and the impact all but sniapped his back in two; but he colliciaed blindly, tetching upagainst a ventilator, and there he lay for some seconds, hardly able to stir hand or foot; the breath knocked out of him. Within three feet was the bell rope, but he could not reach it by a foot, and to try to squeeze down between the ends of the cars would have meant being cut in two by the roof edges.

One thing only was left. With least strength in him be crawled over the roof of the ear to the enginer in the say would be supplied forward to the enginer in the cab. With blood gushing out his scaip wounds, he threw himself upon the engineer from behind. "Stop! Stop! For God's sake, back up," he shouted above the racket. Not a second was to spare. Down went brakes, and the treman ranead-with a toroit-to bleek the oncoming freighter, while the engineer of the excursion train backed framer.

GERMANY.

The civic authorities in Berlin, in view of the successful results which have followed similar action in the se of other German towns, have decided to grant, next year, a subsidy of £150 ($750) to the Headquarters of The Salvation Army.

Writing from Berlin to the International Headquarters, a woman says "I was assisted by The Salvation Army some time ago, in one of your Homes. I have a brother who is stranded in London. Will you rescue him? You are the only people who can do it."

A remarkable sequel to an holiness address delivered in London by Mrs. General Bootb, has brought to light in connection with the visit of Staff-Captain Westergaard to Vegaardsheien, a Norweglan country town.

Twenty years ago a sea-captain at-tended the address referred to, obtained the blessing of full Salvation, and, on returning home to Vegaardsheren commenced to testify about hie new experience with the result (says Brigadier Gundersen) that awakening broke out, and soon the district for miles around was affame with salvation! The townspeople, who are naturally very interested in The Army, asked the Staff-Captain to conduct three meetings in their largest Hall. These services commenced at eleven o'clock Sunday morning, and continned, with only a short interval, until four o'clock in the afternoon.

The Staff-Captain gave two salvation addresses, and spoke on The Army's Social Work and the congregation gave a substantial offering for our Work.

SOUTH AFRICA.

Brigadier and Mrs. Jordan were warm welcome at Cape Town recently. The Brigadian has been appointed to the post of Training Principal for South Africa. He will also have the oversight of the Western Division.

The annual street collection on hebalf of the Cape Town Rescue Homes and Maternity Hospital, was recently taken up and about $250 was realised.

The following report of a meeting in the Transkei District, gives some insight into the nature of our Work

"Fifty-three adults at a beer-drink listened to a Sunday morning service, the beer-pots meantime being deserted. All were raw Pondos, except three young men who were, evidently, professing Christians, did not seem to enjoy their position.
"The Headman had a seat brought, and listened attentively. Although well in body, he said he did not feel well 'inside,' and asked us to come again. At another beer-drink we were asked to come into a hut and hold a meeting with thirty-six 'reds' inside, and nearly twenty outside listening. A blind man said if we only restore would believe; we told him Jesus would take away the darkness from his soul.

The British Christmas Numbers.

We have received the British Christmas publications, and, usual, they reflect credit on the skill of the various Editors. The War Cry is enlarged to twenty-four pages, and is brimful of interesting matter. The supplement is a well-printed re-production of Topham's famous picture of the presentation by Hannah, of her son to God. It is a strong special number, and we congratulated our old Canadian comrade, Lieut. Colonel Moss, on its production.

The Social Gazette has a very attractive front page—an illustrated story. We like it very much.

The Young Soldier, as usual, is a model of its kind. Colonel Duff commands the grallinde of all the British Young People, for the inspiring she makes for literary provision them. She also lays the Editors of the various Young Soldlers, under a tribute for the inspiration they derive from the British Young Soldier.

All the World, and the other pub-lications, worthily represent the Britich Editorial Department, and beartily congratulate all concerned.

We live many, many miles from a Salvation Corps, and the two little girls in the family with whom I live, have never been able Army meetings or to belong to a Company, though they have wished that they could. Yet they have never made that an excuse for not doing what lies in their power. They were quite small when this wonderful love took possession of them. And that it was love of the real kind, we soon saw. In the nearest vilinge to us there are very few people who are out and out for God. have a nice church right in the centre, but nobody came to the service. Last winter the minister, who has to drive ten miles to the service, decided that he would not come any more, as it was not worth while to take his poor horse through the deep snowdrifts, to find a cold church and no congregation. Everybody said he was quite right; that the church must be closed, and the Sunday School broken up, as there was no minister, and no money to buy fuel to heat the church.

Our two little girls had taught in the Sunday School ever sluce they were twelve and thirteen, and they felt very hadly about their children. We did not see, however, that there was anything to be done, and pointed out to them that they had done what they could, and God would not ask them for more. There are a great many proverbs about love that are very true. One of these says, "Love will find a way," and another that "Love laughs at locksmithe," both of which mean about the same thing. Evidently, our two girlies believed in both of them,

They announced one day that they intended to keep the Sunday School going as long as possible. They bad reen the sexton of the church, who "didn't mind if he did open the church Sundays." Their grandpapa reminded them that the mild the mild weather would not last they could not expect children to sit and freeze. They said they knew all about that, but, perhaps, "something would happen.

Something did happen, in the shape of a load of wood, so that on cold Sundays the church could be heated. Later, an old lady in the village opened her big, warm parlose, and let them have their Sunday School there; so, contrary to all expestations, the Sunday School was Somehow, he must begin again.

So the frightened drunkard, born So the frightened drunkard, born and bred in the gutters of the slums took to the roads in middle age, and tramped out of London, to save his soul. I have never seen a man's face express more suffering then the intered, weather-beaten face of this rag-gand-bond merehaut, when he described to me the horrors of a trainp's life. To trainp lift the legs are like boards the feet like burning coals, the empty stomach travenous and tigerish for food, and everywhere to find the doors of homes shut against one, to receive only fierce or mocking looks from men, frightened or contemptions glances from women and children; to walk on and on under a burning sky, through a downpour of rushing mist and blood-congealing cold—always regarded with suspicion, barked at by dogs in furmyards and stables, followed threateningly oy the village pollecman, refused not only one helpful word, or one kindly gift, but refused work of any kind, the lardest and most menial—this is an experience which hardens a man's heart, turns the blood to vinegar, and makes him the savage enemy of his own kind.

Nor was it much better when he reached the shetter of a werthouse and bred in the gutters of the slums the blood to vinegar, and makes him the savage enemy of his own kind.

Nor was it much better when he reached the shelter of a workhouse. No effort was made to save his soul, to humanise his heart with kindness. No one ever sought to rectain him, to provide him with manly work, to hold out the lope of wages, hope, and self-respect. From the moment when the door of the workhouse opened, he was treated as a criminal. Hard words and hard looks accompanied him to his hed, and before he could eat a workhouse breakfast, he had to break—this broken tramp, starwing for nourishment—thalf a ton of stone. Many a time on the road he felt deserted by man and God, and driven by some inexorable devil onwards to greater suffering and more terriple hell. Again and again he abandoned hop, lived in blackest despeir, and only refrained from self-destruction out of feur of hell. And all the time he was tortured by a crawing for alcohol, which was like a fire burning at his tramped one day agrees Salic

He told me a curious story. He had tramped one day aeross Sallsbury plain, and on the point of collapse from starvation, he sank down in a ditch, and, covering his face with his hands, weeping like a child, he cried aloud, "O God give me something to eat!" A feciling of help came to him in the midst of his exhaustion and despair. He took his hands from his face and looked to right and left of him; not a soul was to be seen. His eyes looked ahead of him. In the opposite hedge he saw a plece of paper. He got up, convinced that there was the help he sought. The paper turned out to be a bag. It contained two scenes; He tramped back to London, fect-

"and you can have my kitchen any time you like"

So the meetings were started, the girls saddled their horses, and rode all round the country asking the people to come, and the man who owned the one store, offered to put up notices for them at any time they liked. Men and women who never went to church came to those little gatherings, and somebody said the village heard more about God that winter than it had ever heard before. But that was not the end. An old minister, who had retired and come to live with his children in a willage some distance away, heard of the efforts that were being made to keep the church going, and volunteered to do what he could through the summer.

Here and there he managed to cadge a dright. Now and again he picked something up in the gutters, which he was able to sell for beer. Occasionally he got a copner for helding a horse. Once or twice he held the spirited cob of the Puncher, while that flash prize-fighter was drinking in the saloon bars. In this manner he existed for months and months, atways therefore over dray more dreadful a creature to look at, se that even many in like case with himself, gave him a wide berth.

One day, when he was quite pennless, the craving for alcohol became so forceful and irresistible that he knew, whatever the cost, he must obtain it. At that moment he was on the edge of crime. Like a ravenous beast, he went slouching at a half-run through the siveets, looking with his-ferocious eyes, for some chance of getting money and drink. As luck would have it, he saw the landlord of a public-house in which he had pient hundreds of pounds, talking to a man at the door. Feddy, in his vite rags, went up to him and said, "Will you trust me with a pot till to-morrow?"

The landlord looked at him with contempt, and answered. "Don't you see im talking to a gentleman?"

The landlord looked at him with contempt, and answered. "Don't you see I'm talking to a gentleman."

But Toddy's craving was proof against insult and contempt.

"Trust me till to-morrow!" he said. "I'm perishing for a drink."

The landlord made no answer.

Again Toddy made his request.

Als time he was told to go to hell. "Come on," pleaded the poor wretch, "give us one chance; just a drink, only one; I'll go away quiet if you will."

"Oh, go and mess The Army about!" said the publican, with impatient contempt.
